

Call for Expression of Interest for Academic Appointments

The Frederick School of Medicine invites Expressions of Interest from outstanding academics who wish to join a new medical school committed to excellence in medical education, clinical practice, research, and innovation.

The School is being established with a curriculum based on the internationally respected University of Manchester Medical School programme. This collaboration ensures that the structure, learning outcomes, and educational philosophy of the Manchester curriculum — renowned for its integration of clinical experience, research-informed teaching, and patient-centred learning — form the foundation of the new degree. At the same time, the programme will be thoughtfully adapted to reflect the healthcare priorities, regulatory framework, and cultural context of Cyprus, ensuring that graduates are prepared to meet local and regional medical needs while benefiting from an internationally respected academic framework.

This programme represents a distinctive offering in medical education and will be delivered through the Frederick School of Medicine in Limassol, scheduled to launch in September 2028 in the new purposely designed building under development.

As part of its foundation phase, the Frederick School of Medicine seeks to identify highly qualified individuals interested in academic leadership and faculty appointments across a broad range of disciplines who will participate in the development, accreditation, and strategic setup of the School leading up to and including its launch in 2028.

Opportunities

Expressions of Interest are invited for positions in a broad field of core disciplines at all academic ranks:

- Professor
- Associate Professor
- Assistant Professor
- Lecturer

In addition to teaching and research opportunities, the School will consider candidates for the following academic leadership roles:

- Vice Dean for Academic Affairs
- Academic Head of Quality Assurance
- Academic Head of Assessments and Examinations
- Academic Head of Student Experience
- Academic Year Leads

Appointments may be considered on a:

- Full-time basis
- Part-time basis
- Visiting faculty basis

Areas of Interest

Applications are welcomed from candidates with expertise in:

- Biology
- Anatomy
- Physiology
- Biochemistry
- Pharmacology
- Histology
- Microbiology
- Clinical Communications
- Clinical Skills

Candidates for clinical education roles will be invited to submit expressions of interest within the next academic year.

The School's Vision

The Frederick School of Medicine seeks to become a leading centre for medical education and research in the Eastern Mediterranean region and beyond. Faculty members will have the opportunity to:

- Contribute to the implementation and continuous enhancement of a modern, integrated medical curriculum based on the University of Manchester model.
- Participate in innovative teaching methodologies, including team-based learning, simulation, and early clinical exposure.
- Engage with healthcare partners and community stakeholders.
- Help shape the culture, governance, and strategic direction of a new medical school from its inception.

Candidate Profile

Successful candidates will typically possess:

- A doctoral degree, medical degree, or equivalent qualification relevant to the discipline.
- Demonstrated excellence in teaching, clinical practice, research, or academic leadership.
- Experience in curriculum development, accreditation procedures, or educational innovation (desirable).
- A commitment to student-centred education and professional development.
- Evidence of scholarly activity and academic achievement appropriate to career stage.
- The ability to work collaboratively within multidisciplinary and multicultural environments.

Expression of Interest Submission

Interested individuals are invited to submit the following to vacancies@frederick.ac.cy by 15 September 2026:

1. A curriculum vitae.
2. A brief statement of interest (maximum two pages) outlining:
  - Academic and professional expertise.
  - Areas of teaching and research interest.
  - Previous leadership, accreditation engagement, or curriculum development experience.
  - The nature of appointment sought (full-time, part-time, or visiting) and employment start availability.

Selection Process

This Expression of Interest process is intended to establish a pool of prospective academic staff and academic leaders for future appointments. Submission of an Expression of Interest does not constitute a formal application for employment.

Suitable candidates will subsequently be invited to participate in discussions regarding specific academic opportunities as the School expands its faculty complement.
